Starting

Planet Theta

Make sure your computer is connected to the internet and that your headset is on and plugged in before clicking the PT_MP.exe file. If you are using an Oculus Quest and this is your first time using Oculus Link, please follow this quick tutorial to get Oculus Link working. The Oculus app on your computer should show your device as active.

After confirming your VR headset is ready to go and on, double click on the PT_MP.exe file in the folder that you unzipped in the first step. This will open up the application. If your headset is not working, it will show the following error on the TV in-game.

If this is on the TV, please make sure your headset is ready to go then close the application and reopen it. If the TV is showing a code on the screen, you're in and ready to go!

How To Link Your Account

Planet Theta \(pptprodapp.azurewebsites.net\)

Now, on the Planet Theta website, there are icons at the top middle.

Click the far right one that looks like a checkmark.

Here you should see a new page to activate your device and input a code. Back in the game, on the TV in the middle of the screen, you should see your unique code. Write this code on the website then click “Activate”.

If the TV does not change, please close the game and reopen it.

The new screen should look like the following image.

Maneuvering In-Game

You're all set up! First, to move around you use the left analog stick to turn left and right. If you push forward on the left analog stick, it shows a teleport ray. You're able to change the direction of the ray by moving the analog stick to that direction and when you release it teleports you. On the right controller, you can move around similar to "WASD". NOTE: You can not move while sitting. You can pick up certain objects in-game that highlight when hovered over with either controller grip. To interact with the TV or the mirror, point at the screen and the hovered button with highlights. Press the trigger button to select.

On the watch, there is a home button that spawns in your tablet. Point your finger at the screen of the watch and when it is highlighted you can touch the button with your finger. This tablet is how you will see other players' information as well as your own. You interact with the tablet by physically clicking on the screen, as you would with a real tablet.

You can select the icons on the left of the tablet to show different screens. From top to bottom is the Home Screen, where you can return to your room or select different maps to travel to. Then Profile, where you see your information. This is still in development and only shows your nickname and if you were given a like or super like. Next is the Social Page which is all still in development but this will be where you can see your invites, contacts, matches, and go on quick dates. Below that is the settings, which are not yet implemented. Next is the mute button which will mute and unmute yourself. Last is the Leave Game where you can easily quit the application. To close the tablet, hit the top right red button.

When enter in the experience you only see your hands, but the other users will see your avatar.

Things To Do

- In your room, (the starting level) if you didn't create an avatar then a random avatar will be assigned in the Multiplayer experience.
- On the home page from the tablet or on the TV, select a map to join. Once in a map, you are online! You can see other people's avatars and hear them!
- Select another user by pointing at them and when they highlight you can hit the trigger button on your controller and a tablet will spawn in front of you with their information.
- On the tablet with their information, you can send a like or a super like.
- When you are liked, a notification shows up on your Profile page on the tablet. You can see everyone who liked you there.
- You are only able to see their nickname and the image is preloaded, no other user information is loaded for now.
- When you sit in real life, your full-body avatar also sits.
- When done, you can open up the tablet (on the watch, click the home button) and on the Home page, there is the button "return home" on the bottom right which will teleport you back to your room.
